We officially kicked off the project, with a warm welcome and name games to help participants start getting to know one another. The day began with the “name tag” and “line game” activities, followed by the mug exchange and the establishment of group rules.

After a coffee break, participants were assigned different chores to contribute to the smooth running of the project. We continued with more introductory tasks, writing down fears, expectations, and potential contributions, which were collected into a collaborative word cloud.

Post-lunch, the group dived into a set of energizing and reflective activities including a rhythm-based, the “name ball” game, and the “my first job” circle where participants shared their first job experience and what it taught them. These activities built a sense of trust and light-heartedness among participants.

The evening session concluded with a discussion on skills and a reflective sharing round. Participants identified key soft and hard skills they hoped to develop throughout the program, setting the tone for personal growth and learning.
