The second day took place in the garage and around Nea Kallikrateia, with a dynamic blend of outdoor challenges and reflection sessions. The morning began with a "fast dating" session, followed by the "Mission Impossible" city challenge.

Participants formed teams and received a list of 24 creative tasks ranging from learning Greek phrases, locating local landmarks, creating group TikToks, taking thematic photos, crafting playlists, and gathering quirky insights from the group (like strange objects brought to the project). These activities not only built team spirit but also encouraged interaction with the local community and creative exploration of the area.

After regrouping for a coffee break, teams shared their results, and a reflection session led to a discussion about leadership and identifying different leadership types within the teams.

The afternoon featured a chair game and the much-anticipated "Skill Market." Participants exchanged personal talents in mini-workshops, such as drawing, dancing, journaling, or teaching phrases from their native languages. This created a collaborative space for knowledge exchange.

For the final session of the day we engaged in an interactive workshop focused on the concept of the skill ladder. During the activity, we identified key competencies required in different career paths and collaboratively built personalized skill ladders, mapping out our current abilities and setting future development goals. Through group discussions and role-playing exercises, the participants explored how upskilling and continuous learning can enhance employability and active citizenship. The workshop not only helped them recognize the importance of lifelong learning but also encouraged peer-to-peer learning and self-reflection in a multicultural environment. Also, through group discussions and role-playing stressful scenarios, participants learned techniques to manage pressure and maintain mental well-being. Practical tools such as mindfulness, reframing challenges, and SMART goal setting were introduced to support personal development.

The day concluded with another results-sharing round, closing with a sense of achievement and empowerment. The night was hosted by the Greek team with a Greek intercultural night .
