As it was the final day of our project we started our day at the session room with an activity of completing an individual evaluation and reflection activity. This process allowed participants to think critically about their personal learning journey, the skills they developed, and the challenges they overcame during the program. They reflected on both the academic and cultural aspects of the experience, highlighting how it contributed to their personal growth and future goals. The individual reflections also provided valuable feedback for the organizers, helping them understand the impact of the program and how it could be improved for future participants.

After the coffee break, it was time for group evaluation. The participants found the people in the group that they didn't spend so much time with during the project and we started walking around the room. They became pairs and the task was to leave their phones behind and go have a walk with the person they were paired with.

As part of the final stage of the Erasmus+ project "Towards a Europe of Skills," participants took part in a brainstorming session focused on follow-up activities, after lunch. During this collaborative discussion, the participants shared ideas on how to apply the knowledge and skills gained during the program in their local communities and schools. They explored possibilities such as organizing workshops, creating digital presentations, starting awareness campaigns, or developing new partnerships. The session encouraged creativity, teamwork, and long-term thinking, ensuring that the impact of the program would continue even after its official end.

Later after the last coffee break, the participants took part in a discussion about the YouthPass certificate and its importance. They learned how YouthPass recognized their non-formal learning achievements throughout the program and how it could be used to showcase their skills in future academic or professional opportunities. The discussion also encouraged students to reflect on their personal development, including teamwork, communication, and problem-solving abilities. Sharing experiences and thoughts in an open environment helped everyone understand the value of the YouthPass as a tool for both self-reflection and future planning.

The day ended in the session room for the Bulgarian intercultural night. The night closed with a farewell beach party and a lot of hugs.
